Greenberg, York Homers Erase Dickman's Lead in Seventh

Tom Yawkey's scenario writer pulled a Corrigan on the boys and the Detroit Tigers took a slicker finish decision from the Red Sox, 4 to 3, in 10 innings before 12,000 Sunday customers yesterday afternoon.

It was the eighth overtime clash for the boys in red and their initial setback in non-regulation hours this season. Outbitting the Del Baker brigade, 11 to 7, the Sox were unable to group their base knocks as Tommy Bridges, the hook ball specialist, refused to wilt under pressure.

Emerson Dickman served them up for the Red Sox and went along with a two-run lead until those thumping twins, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, came to bat in the seventh. When Hank and Rudy belted their 45th and 23th homers, respectively, the game was sent into extra innings.

A triple by Mark Christman and Chuck Morgan's infield single, on which Joe Cronin made a remarkable stop, produced the deciding Tiger tally.

The script went something like this. With one gone in the second, York doubled off the top of the center field wall and scored on Tony Peña's single to left. The Sox squared it up in their half of the inning in a strange manner. Ben Chapman singled with one out, Bobby Doerr bounced a slow roller between first base and the drive and Bridges mistimed the drive and when Chapman tried to reach third and the play, he was heaved out. Doerr promptly stole second and rode home on Johnny Peacock's single through the box.

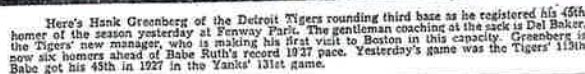

Chapman broke the deadlock in the fourth with a home run into the left field netting. Pinky Higgins, who had walked, was tossed out at second just one pitch earlier as Chapman missed connection on a hit and run play. The Tigers' victory by now the exciting was breaking in the ball for the Cronin troupe.

When Cronin doubled and Higgins singled in the fifth, the Sox had a two-run lead and, with Dickman coasting along brilliantly, the outlook was rosy for the home boys. But Cronin could say "I'm a little swag," as Jędrzejowska, the Tigers knotted things up in the seventh.

Greenberg set the home run style with his 45th base-circling smash. It put him 10 days ahead of Babe Ruth's record of 1927. York outdid his teammate by sending one over the fence and netting, and the boys were back at scratch.

The Sox's only threat to break the tie came with two out in the eighth when Dickman and Cramer singled in occasion and Joe Vonnick's high loft was blasted by Tony Piet. It seemed tied until the Tiger's 10th-inning turn. The Sox whiffed. Christman cracked a liner into center, Cramer attempted to make a shoe-string catch of the ball, but failed, and it went for a triple. Morgan hit a rifle shot. Cramer left. Cronin wanted to stop, but he never had a chance to get the flying Detroit outfielder at first. His heavens soared into the Red Sox dugout as Christman scored and Morgan reached second. Dixie Walker reached home. The Sox were in. Bridges bowled the Sox down in order in the 10th.

Final appearance of the Tigers is scheduled for 3 this afternoon, with Black Jack Wilson hurling for the Hub and Eldon Aufer for the Tigers. . . . Greenberg's homer yesterday was only his third here this season. . . . He usually has averaged nine. . . . Cramer must be a clean liver. . . . He gambled on Christmas's clout in the 19th and lost.

Greenberg Goes 6 Up on Ruth's Homer Pace With No. 45 in Boston Game

BOSTON, Aug. 28 (AP).—Detroit's veteran curve-ball artist, Tommy Bridges, outlasted Rookie Emerson Dickman over the ten-inning route today and the Tigers took a 4-to-3 edge over the Red Sox in the series opener. It was the first extra-inning game the Red Sox lost this season. By winning the Tigers gained fourth place.

The Red Sox outhit the Tigers, 11 to 7, but left eleven men on bases. The Tigers clinched the game in the first overtime inning when Mark Christman tripped with one out and came home on Chet Morgan's single to deep short.

Dickman enjoyed a 3-1 lead going into the seventh, but Hank Greenberg and Rudy York connected for consecutive homers to even the score. It was Greenberg's forty-fifth round-tripper, and he moved six home runs in front of the pace Babe Ruth set in his record 1927 season, when the Bambino walloped sixty-four baggers.

Today's game was the Tigers' 119th (or 118th if one tie is excluded). The Babe did not hit his forty-fifth in 1927 until the Yanks' 131st game that year. At the 118-game mark Ruth had only thirty-nine.

Ben Chapman was mixed up in most of Boston's scoring, making a homer and two singles.
