

Red Sox Suffer First Extra-Inning Defeat of Year in 10th Inning--Errickson Brilliant as Bees Split

DETROIT TOPS SOX
IN 10TH INNING, 4-3

Greenberg, York Homers Erase
Dickman's Lead in Seventh

By HY HURWITZ
Tom Yawkey's scenario writer pulled a Corrigan on the boys and the Detroit Tigers took a slicker finish decision from the Red Sox, 4 to 3, in 10 innings before 18,000 Sunday customers yesterday afternoon.

It was the eighth overtime clash for the boys in red and their initial setback in non-regulation hours this season. Outbitting the Del Baker brigade, 11 to 7, the Sox were unable to group their base knocks as Tommy Bridges, the hook ball specialist, refused to wilt under pressure.

Emerson Dickman served them up for the Red Sox and went along with a two-run lead until those thumping twins, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, came to bat in the seventh. When Hank and Rudy belted their 45th and 29th homers, respectively, the game was sent into extra innings. A triple by Mark Christman and Chick Morgan's infield single, on which Joe Cronin made a remarkable stop, produced the deciding Tiger tally.

How Runs Were Scored
The script went something like this. With one gone in the second, York doubled off the top of the center field wall and scored on Tony Piet's single to left. The Sox squared it up in their half of the inning in a strange manner. Ben Chapman singled with one dead. Bobby Doerr bounced a slow one between first base and the mound. Bridges miscued on the drive and when Chapman tried to reach third on the play, he was heaved out. Doerr promptly stole second and rode home on Johnny Peacock's single through the box.

Chapman broke the deadlock in the fourth with a home run into the left field netting. Pinky Higgins, who had walked, was tossed out at second just one pitch earlier as Chapman missed connections on a hit and run play. It was obvious by now that everything was breaking badly for the Cronin troupe.

When Cronin doubled and Higgins singled in the fifth, the Sox had a two-run lead and, with Dickman coasting along brilliantly, the outlook was rosy for the hoosier boys. But before you could say "Mile. Jadwiga Jedrzewska," the Tigers knotted things up in the seventh.

Greenberg, York Tee Off
Greenberg set the home run style with his 45th base-circling smash. It put him 10 days ahead of Babe Ruth's record of 1927. York outdid his teammate by sending one over the fence and netting and the boys were back at scratch.

The Sox' only threat to break the new tie came with two out in the eighth when Dickman and Cramer singled in succession but Joe Vosmik's high left was taken by Tony Piet. It remained tied until the Tigers' 10th-inning turn. After Piet whiffed, Christman cracked a liner into center. Cramer attempted to make a shoe-string catch of the ball, but failed, and it went for a triple. Morgan hit a rifle shot towards left that Cronin by a superhuman effort managed to stop, but he never had a chance to get the flying Detroit outfielder at first. His heave soared into the Red Sox dugout, as Christman scored and Morgan reached second. Dixie Walker skied out to end the inning.

Bridges bowled the Sox down in order in the 10th.

HIT AND RUN
Final appearance of the Tigers is scheduled for 3 this afternoon, with Black Jack Wilson hurling for the Hub and Eldon Auker for the Tigers.

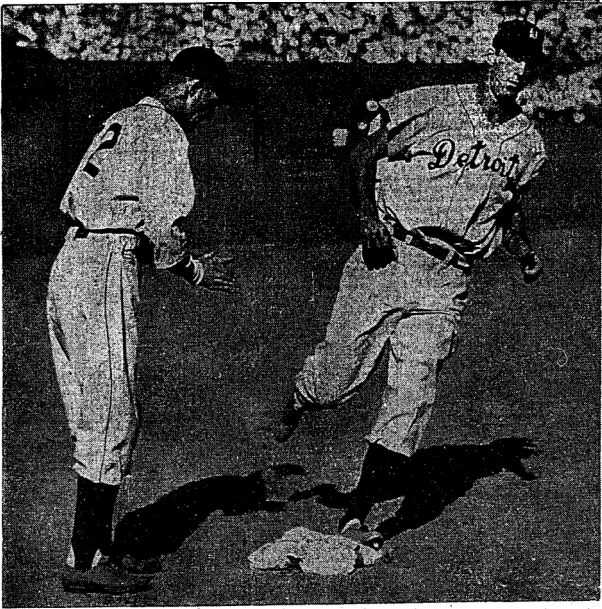

... Greenberg's homer yesterday was only his third here this season.

... He usually has averaged six.

... Cramer must be a clean liver.

... He gambled on Christman's clout in the 10th and lost.

"FINE, HANK!" SAYS MR. BAKER

Here's Hank Greenberg of the Detroit Tigers rounding third base as he registered his 45th homer of the season yesterday at Fenway Park. The gentleman coaching at the sack is Del Baker, the Tigers' new manager, who is making his first visit to Boston in this capacity. Greenberg is now six homers ahead of Babe Ruth's record 1927 pace. Yesterday's game was the Tigers' 119th. Babe got his 45th in 1927 in the Yanks' 131st game.
